

11 April 2015

In accordance with the will of General Anders and the commanders of the units comprising the Southern Division I hereby assume command of our organization. Though assumption of command in the midst of the impending changes to our hobby and our organization is a daunting task, I remain fully assured that with the continued loyalty and fidelity of the men who comprise the 'Division' that we will jointly continue to move our great endeavor "to honor their sacrifice" forward.

General Anders used his experience, energy, and foresight to create our organization, one unique to our hobby. Though created expressly for the purpose of carrying us through the sesquicentennial our eminent success has convinced many of us that our efforts should not be suspended simply because the cycle has ended. I therefore humbly request that we re-commit ourselves to General Anders' original vision as we wish him success in his retirement and as a tribute to him, ourselves, and especially the men who served.
